

We've created a useful check list for you to remind you who to notify separately to us:

Government

- Department for Work and Pensions
- HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC)
- Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority (DVLA)
- Electoral roll
- TV Licensing

Financial institutions

- Banking and savings account providers
- Credit card companies
- Investment funds
- Store loyalty card providers
- Pension services.

Insurance providers

- Contact any companies you have insurance with, including:
- Car insurance (and any breakdown services provider)
- Home insurance
- Mobile phone insurance
- Pet insurance
- Life insurance
- Health insurance (including dental insurance).

Utility suppliers

- Water supplier
- Gas provider
- Electricity provider

Regular bills

- Home phone
- Broadband
- Cable TV
- Mobile phone

Health services

- Local NHS doctor's surgery - register ASAP so there are no delays when you need to see your GP
- Specialists, such as your dentist and optician.

Work and education contacts

- Your employers (and company pension fund)
- Colleagues and alumni networks
- Professional associations
- Schools, colleges and educational institutions

Leisure and family activities

- Newspaper, magazine and newsletter subscriptions
- Clubs, including sports teams or gym
- Charities you support
- Pet microchip databases

Redirecting your mail and calls

If you've lived in your property for many years, you'll have a lot of work to do updating people and companies with your new contact details.

You can make this process easier by using the Post Office's change-of-address service, which takes up to 10 days to come into effect and redirects all mail to your new address. You can keep this service for three, six or 12 months after moving into your new home to avoid post going astray.